

Friend Kills Herbalist's 27-year-old Son While Testing Anti-bullet Charms In Ondo

BY TOPE FAYEHUN, Akure

A 27-year-old son of a traditionalist identified as Tunde Akinmoyewa has been shot dead at Laos Camp, via Laje in Ondo West Local Government Area of Ondo state.

LEADERSHIP Weekend learnt that Tunde was shot dead by his friend, Bode while testing anti-bullet charms given to them by a native at the camp.

The deceased, who was an ex-convict, was said to have drunk a 'bullet-repelling' concoction prepared for him and his group to be sure of the potency of charms.

It was gathered that Tunde and his gang were assured by the herbalist that no bullet could penetrate their body in case they were shot by anyone.

According to a source, in the process of testing the potency of the charms, the deceased was said to have instructed his friend to test the potency of the charms by shooting him to be sure that the charms were effective.

It was learnt that after Tunde's friend fired his Dane gun at him, he fell without any resistance and died on the spot.

He was reportedly rushed to the nearest hospital at the camp, where he was confirmed dead, while his gang who shot him took to their heels before the villagers arrived at the scene.

Confirming the incident, the Public Relations Officer (PPRO) of Ondo State Police Command, Funmilayo Odunlami-Omisanya, said the deceased was also a cultist and died while testing a locally made gun they newly procured.

Odunlami-Omisanya said he was accidentally shot dead by one of his boys, Bode, who is currently on the run.

She added that the deceased died while being taken to the hospital for medical attention.

According to the PPRO, the remains of the deceased have been deposited in the morgue while efforts are in top gear to arrest the suspect.
