Confusion has enveloped Awomamma community in Oru-West local government area of Imo State following the alleged invasion by operatives of the Ebubeagu Security Network which has left a 34-year-old-man dead.

Sources said the gunmen had arrived the community in a Sienna vehicle and started shooting sporadically into the air which caused panic as people scampered to safety, after which they drove off.

However, a stray bullet was said to have hit the victim whose identity was yet to confirmed as at press time.

Distraught relatives had put the lifeless body in a wheelbarrow which they carried round the community singing dirge songs amidst lamentation over the loss.

In the viral video circulating on social media platforms, the community people blamed the death on operatives of Ebubeagu Security Network who they said invaded Awomamma on Monday.

An old man was heard saying "God, what have we done to deserve this? This boy lying dead here is neither a thief nor an armed robber. In fact, our children are not armed robbers. He was only going to buy bread at the next store when he was attacked by Ebubeagu operatives who shot him dead.
