Tragedy struck at Kugbo Furniture Market at about 5:30pm last Friday when a car with registration number BO775RHS lost control and crushed a Fulani woman, with the driver fleeing and abandoning his car.

LEADERSHIP gathered that on that fateful day, the red Toyota car was coming from Abuja, and heading in the direction of Nyanya, when the unexpected happened. It was gathered that the Fulani woman went out in the morning to sell "nunu," the local milk from cow, and was returning to her residential area at Angwa Mada.

She was about to cross the fast and sloppy road, when the car which was running at high speed lost control and hit the woman and threw her into the gutter that petitioned the lanes, her calabash scattering all over the place.

This reporter saw many sympathizers gathered around the corpse with some trying to call the police.

An eyewitness, Emmanuel Chinedu, who own a furniture shop at Kugbo, said: "I was in my shop when this lady passed and greeted me. She is my customer. I never knew that will be my last discussion with the woman. Not up to three minutes later, I saw people running to the road. People that saw when the incident happened said the driver was on top speed, while the woman had already got to the centre of the road to cross to the other side."

By the time of going to press, the police were yet to get to the scene, and none of those gathered knew the whereabouts of the driver.
