

Lagos landlady's son kills tenant

RESIDENTS of Atanda Street in Sari Iganmu, Lagos were stunned when a landlady killed one of her tenants over the use of toilet and bathroom.

The Nation gathered that a tenant in the house on 13, Atanda Street, who police gave her name as Chiamaka Mezie had retuned from work Tuesday evening only to meet locked toilet and bathroom and so could not gain access into the place.

Upon enquiry, she was told that it was her landlady that changed the lock, but because she was already having misunderstanding with the woman, she decided her brother, Obinna should find out from her what the problem was.

When Obinna approached the landlady, she allegedly took offence, and called her son, Segun, whom she told that the former insulted her and as such deserved some beating.

When the landlady's son arrived, he immediately went into action. He stabbed Obinna with a broken bottle on his chest and abdomen. The victim died on the spot. The landlady and her son fled and were yet to be arrested.
