Hoodlums yesterday invaded the Ibadan, Oyo State home of the Vice Chancellor of Olabisi Onabanjo University (OOU) Ago Iwoye, Prof. Wale Olaitan, killing his police orderly.

The incident occurred barely 24hours after Olaitan's appointment.

The orderly was shot twice in the chest and his gun taken away.

The robbers stormed Olaitan's Oluyole Estate home around 11:25 am in a Toyota Camry car.

They gained access when his wife, Kemi, went to open the gate for them after they had knocked repeatedly.

Olaitan was said to be having breakfast with his family members after returning from church when the robbers struck.

It was gathered that Mrs Olaitan led the robbers to the back of the house, where they sighted the deceased.

They shot him, removed his gun and left the building immediately without taking any item.

His remains have been deposited at the morgue of Adeoyo State Hospital, Yemetu, Ibadan.

The Nation

gathered that Olaitan had peeped from the window upstairs to find out why it took his wife so long to return to the dining table.

He reportedly recoiled on sighting the robbers, one of whom was said to have pointed a gun at him.

He retreated and hid himself in the building with other members of his family.

The Police Public Relations Officer (PPRO), Miss Olabisi Okuwobi, described the incident as unfortunate.

She said nothing was removed from the house.

Okuwobi said the incident would be investigated.

OOU has been in crisis in recent times. Several members of staff were relieved of their jobs in the process of restructuring the institution before Olaitan's appointment at the weekend.

He was a Deputy Vice Chancellor before his appointment.
