

Man 'stabs' co-tenant to death in Enugu

Chris Oji

A tenant in Enugu has allegedly stabbed a co-tenant to death over an electricity bill.

Uzodinma Eneh was alleged to have stabbed Prince Uzor at the weekend in Trans Ekulu.

A statement by police spokesman Ebere Amaraizu said the duo were arguing over the sharing of the bill of the house where they live.

The statement said Eneh was reportedly infuriated by comments from the victim, leading him to stab Uzor with a knife.

The victim was rushed to ESUT Parklane Teaching Hospital, where he died.

The suspect has since been arrested.

The police yesterday arrested two suspects, Sunday Ayogu and Kenneth Kingsley, for alleged robbery.

It was gathered that the suspects reportedly broke into the house of their victim, where they stole N250,000.

Sources said when the victim raised the alarm, some neighbourhood watchmen called the police.

The area was cordoned off and the suspects were arrested.

The police said they recovered five handsets, a matchet, N197,000 and a long cut-to-size locally made dane gun.