A 35-year old man, Mohammed Audu, was at the weekend bitten to death by his wife, Umami.

The late Audu, who hailed from Peta village near Biu, was a worker of Buni Yadi General Hospital, Borno State.

Sources said trouble started when Umami was allegedly told that her husband was planning to take a second wife.

She was reported to have confronted her husband, who slapped her.

The wife retaliated, held her husband's finger and bit it.

Audu was rushed to the hospital for treatment and came back home to sleep.

He was found dead his by children the following morning.

Police spokesman Adamu Ali said the case has not been reported.

Ali said: "I have contacted the Criminal Investigation Department (CID), but I was told such case has not been reported. I will still find out and get back to you (reporters)."
