He said the Navy and the Air force would operate from the riverine areas. There will also be two helicopters for aerial surveillance on election day, the IG added.

He said: "If you break the law, we will break you; the security men are willing and ready for the election in Anambra State. If you do not have any business on election day; stay at home to avoid embarrassment."

"The marine police, naval officers will take care of our water ways, there will be no room for manipulations, we shall all work together to make Anambra a safe and better place during and after the governorship election."

Four policemen heading for Anambra State on election duties were shot dead by gunmen in Edo State.

It was gathered that the policemen, who were deployed from Osun state and travelling in a truck, came under fire at the Benin bypass after which four of them were believed to have died.

It could not be ascertained whether the attackers were armed robbers or they deliberately attacked the policemen.

Details of the attack were also sketchy. Edo Police spokesman Emmanuel Eguavoen said he had not been briefed when our correspondent spoke to him on the telephone last night.
