BARELY a week after a 70- year-old man died in a hotel in Benin while allegedly having sex with a married woman, another tragedy struck on Tuesday when a 44- year-old furniture maker (names withheld) slumped and died during a sex romp with his mistress who is believed to be married. The father of three, who hailed from Agenebode, Etsako East Local Government Area of Edo State, was said to have commissioned his new house last December. According to family sources, staff of the popular hotel where the victim and his unknown lover had booked for a room, became suspicious when the couple failed to come out after the expiration of the one hour they booked. They were said to have found the lifeless body of the victim on the floor after the door was forced opened. It was learnt that items found on him include a packet of sexenhancement tablet, a mobile phone and a cheque of N20m issued by an oil palm company. Men of the Ugbekun Police Division who evacuated the corpse were said to have recovered a Toyota Pathfinder SUV, a mobile phone and a cheque of N20 million, allegedly issued by one of the palm oil companies in the state. The widow, who confirmed the incident, said she found out about the incident when she called her husband's phone line, and was told to report at the police station because her husband had been involved in an accident. While speaking with newsmen on phone, the state Commissioner of Police, Foluso Adebajo, confirmed the incident.
