Mobile policeman lynched in Delta

Posted by: Okungbowa Aiwerie in News ⌚ 15 hours ago

A mobile policeman has been lynched to death by a mob in Ogwashi-Uku, Aniocha Local Government Area of Delta State.

He was accused of killing a private security officer after a scuffle in the State Polytechnic.

The security staff was attached to the office of the rector.

An eye witness said that the armed mobile police officer drove into the school in company of a female student and a young man who was not a student.

The policeman and his companions drove to the administrative block and parked their vehicle at the exit point used by the rector.

He said: "The security officer challenged the man who drove the vehicle ordering him to park the vehicle elsewhere. The policeman and his companions snubbed the security man and walked into the bursar's office, demanding to see the bursar who was at a management meeting.

"The bursar came out from the meeting and was confronted with a gun by the policeman and his companion.

"The bursar reportedly pushed the gun away; the security officer came in at this time and a scuffle ensued during which the gun went off."

The policeman's mission on campus could not be confirmed. But sources said he may have been invited to the school by the student to help compel the bursar to issue her a receipt.

The policeman was beaten by a mob; he died on the way to the hospital.

The rector, Dr Edna Mogeckwu, said the police were investigating the matter.
