Flood claims lecturer's life

Posted by: Adesoji Adeniyi, Osogbo in News 2 days ago

A heavy downpour from Friday through the early hours of Saturday has claimed the life of a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Food Technology, Federal Polytechnic, Offa in Kwara State, Mr. Adeniyi Adebowale.

Adebowale was said to be returning from Offa to Ede, his home town for the weekend when he ran into the flood.

The victim, who was reportedly driving in his Toyota Camry car marked LSD 783 CA LAGOS, had entered into a swampy area with heavy water after which the flood submerged the car.

The deceased, who was said to be living with his family members at Oke-Gada area, was just a short distance away from his residence located at 40/40 Avenue when the incident happened.

According to a family source, who preferred not to be named, the deceased reportedly communicated with his wife, Sade, just few minutes before the incident.

It was gathered that the deceased had been warned not to take the swampy road by other drivers plying the road, but he was alleged to have insisted on passing through the route.
