100 bodies counted at morgue

TROOPS were fighting yesterday with air support to recapture Borno town Monguno from Boko Haram insurgents. No fewer than 5,000 residents, who fled the town, have been taken in as Internally Displaced Persons (IDPs) in Maiduguri.

The insurgents on Sunday seized the town, which lies on the shores of Lake Chad, in a triple offensive that also targeted Konduga and the outskirts and Maiduguri airport.

A local journalist who visited Maiduguri's biggest morgue said more than 100 people, mainly insurgents but also including at least 15 soldiers and a few civilians, had been killed in Sunday's fighting around the city.

The man said he left the morgue after counting 100 bodies. He said another 50 people had been injured in the fighting, Reuters reported.

In Monguno, at least 15 soldiers were killed along with more than 25 civilians, a security source said.
