'Many' killed in Ondo banks' robberies

From Damisi Ojo, Akure

A GANG of robbers yesterday stormed some bank in Owo, Ondo State, killing an unspecified number of people.
It was gathered that the robbers killed the manager and his assistant during the operation.

Although the identities of the deceased bank officials could not be ascertained, it was gathered that the two officials failed to "co-operate" with the robbers.

The suspects, according to findings, stormed the town at 4pm, shooting sporadically into the air till they got to the heart of the town where they robbed four banks.

They were said to have used dynamite to break the security doors leading to the banks.

Sources said the bandits carted away an unspecified amount of money and injured several workers.

The incident caused pandemonium in the town as many residents, who read political meanings to the incident, protested round the town.

It was alleged that police officers, who witnessed the incident, did not challenge the robbers while the operation lasted.

A resident, who pleaded for anonymity, said the robbers entered the town through the Owo-Abuja Road and moved to the town centre.

Police spokesman Wole Ogodo said his men had been deployed to the town to enforce orderliness.

He said: "Details of the incident are still sketchy. I can only give you details of the robbery when our man deployed to the town communicates with me."
