

Yoruba actor, Ajigi Jaga dies at 60

Posted By: Owwe Medeme on: August 01, 2015 In: News No Comments

The death has been announced of popular Yoruba movie actor, Muftau Adio.

In his early 60s, the actor was famously known as Ajigi Jaga.

He died on Friday, July 31, in his Oko-Oba, Agege, Lagos residence.

According to information, his death is as a result of complications following injuries he sustained from a motorcycle accident about two weeks ago.

The actor's demise was confirmed by the President of The Golden Movie Ambassadors (TGMA), Saidi Balogun.

Confirming the sad incident, Saidi described Ajigi Jaga's death as a big loss to the movie industry, especially to members of The Golden Movie Ambassadors.

According to him, "I can recall that he mentioned that his absence at our last meeting was due to injuries he sustained in a motor-bike accident about two weeks ago. I was shocked this morning to get a call from one of his children that he has passed on. We shall miss his useful contributions to discussions on how to move the movie industry forward and instill discipline and professionalism in our members. May his soul rest in peace," he stated.

Ajigi Jaga will be remembered for always playing tough roles in movies, earning him the alias, Broken Bottle. He recently got married to a young bride, Taiwo Hassan.

According to information, his remains will be interred in his village near Wasimi, along Abeokuta, Ogun State today according to Islamic rites.

