A man, identified as Onana Osua, has been shot dead by a police patrol team after killing six persons for alleged food poisoning.

The late Osua was said to have left the hospital, where he was receiving treatment, after he was reportedly poisoned.

He was reportedly told that he had five days to live.

Eyewitnesses said Osua went home, took his gun and went to the homes of those suspected to have poisoned him and shot them dead.

The incident occurred at Uromi, Esan Northeast Local Government Area.

The late Osua was said to be a chairman of a motor park in Uromi.

It was learnt that he killed the wife of one of his targets, when he got to their home.

Osua was said to have fled to Ubiaja in Esan Southwest Local Government Area, where he reportedly shot at a patrol team before he was gunned down.

Police spokesman Abiodun Osifo, a Deputy Superintendent of Police (DSP), said three of the victims had been confirmed dead while the others were at critical conditions in hospital.

The spokesman said Osua shot at the police team, which was aware of his killing spree, adding that the police fired back.
