SOME parts of a deceased 60 year-old woman are reportedly missing at a private hospital in Osogbo, the Osun State capital.

Though it could not be confirmed when she died, the woman took ill on Wednesday and was taken to the hospital at Owode-Oluode by her grandchild.

On Thursday morning, a nurse on duty allegedly rushed the children to carry their mother's body. Then they discovered that her lower lip and a part of her eye are missing.

It was gathered that when the children confronted the nurse, she allegedly said a rat fed on the missing parts.

One of the deceased's children, Waliyat Raji, said: "The doctor confirmed to us that our mother had died and we were told to come for the body the following morning.

"But we were surprised to discover that the lower lip, nasal cartilages and the side of the eyes have been cut off."

Those on duty at the hospital have been detained at Dugbe police station in Osogbo.
