Eight persons, including a man and his wife, have been killed in a cult clash in Idu community of Ogba/Egbema/Ndoni Local Government Area of Rivers State.

Eyewitness said the couple was beheaded while the other victims were burnt beyond recognition.

The killings were said to be the fallout of a clash between two rival cult groups, the Icelanders and the Greenlanders.

The source said the incident happened last Thursday without the media knowing about it.

But the police command said it was not aware of the incident.

Police spokesman Ahmad Mohammad, a Deputy Superintendent of Police (DSP), who spoke on phone with our reporter, said: “I do not know what you are talking about. No such thing happened in the state or the local government area.”

But the source said a fierce battle ensued among the two cult groups, leading to the death of their members.

It was learnt that no innocent person was killed in the clash.
