Four held over hotelier’s death

Posted By: Precious Igbonwelundu on: May 31, 2016 In: City Beats No Comments

The police have arrested four persons over the death of an hotelier, Michael Ogunlusi.

Ogunlusi, the owner of Alloizie Hotel in Owutu, Ikorodu, was killed in his hotel room by gunmen who stormed the place on motorcycles.

It was gathered that the four men, got to the hotel around 11pm. They wore black jeans, T-shirts and fez caps.

The gunmen were said to have pretended to be guests in search of lodging, but as soon as they entered the hotel, they allegedly tied up the gateman.

They herded all those at the reception into a room and locked them up.

The gunmen were said to have gone straight to the room where Ogunlusi and his acquaintance were.

It was gathered that they hit him with the butt of a gun when he opened the door, accusing him of having an affair with their boss’ woman.

Despite pleading for his life, the gunmen allegedly shot him at close range and he alleged died on the spot.

Confirming the suspects’ arrest, acting police command’s spokesperson, Chukwuma Ozoani, a Deputy Superintendent (DSP), said the case has been transferred to the State Criminal Investigations and Intelligence Department, (SCIID) at Pantl, Yaba.

“The lady is helping in police investigation. The other suspects arrested are also corporating. We cannot tell you their names now because they are still suspects and we have to be sure they are connected to the murder. Investigation is ongoing,” he said.
