for 12 HOURS FRESH BREATH

"But yesterday they came for the residents. It was an attack on the community. I don't know why they went on the rampage and killed our people like that.

“Already we have counted about 10 corpses and three injured people have been rushed to the hospital. We have been having meetings and policemen from Ogijo division came to see things for themselves.”

Another resident simply identified as Alhaji said the boys had threatened to return and raze their houses.

He pleaded with government to “come and help us before these militants kill us all,” adding they left threatening to come back and torch our houses. They have even marked some building for destruction. We want justice for our people who have been killed.”

Some of the bereaved families have buried their dead. One of those already buried is one Oladele Ogundare.

A source described him as a comfortable and popular man in the area.

“He was a rich guy. Nobody knows why or how he was killed. But I can confirm to you that his family has buried him,” he said source.

Femi, Oladele’s brother said he was shot up to 10 times in his Sport Utility Vehicle (SUV) by hoodlums.

He said: “My people called and told me that my brother had been killed. I was not there when it happened. They said it was around past 11pm while he was driving that the militants attacked him.

“They deflated his tyres so that he won’t run. His vehicle was riddled with bullets and the wind screen shattered. One of the bullets hit his leg. He was bleeding and ran out of the car to enable him escape, but they pursued him.

“We saw traces of blood from where he left the car to the place his body was found. We have buried him. He was 44 years and he worked at the airport. He left a wife and three children. All we want is justice. We are crying for justice for our brother and for all those killed by the militants.”

The State Police Command, however, confirmed only three deaths.

Spokesperson for the command, Muyiwa Adejobi, said three persons died and one was injured.

He identified one of the deceased as Waheed Buhari, adding that the man was shot with his daughter.

He said: “Gunmen numbering about 100 stormed the riverine community of Elepo around past 11pm. They shot a man, Waheed Buhari, and his daughter, Miriam. The man later died in the hospital but his daughter is responding to treatment.

“We also found two unidentified bodies. So, what was recorded was three fatalities and one injury.

“People are alleging that the gunmen are militants. We cannot say for sure who they are and are not leaving anything to chance since the community is in the riverine area.

“The Police Commissioner has directed a widened scope of investigation and security has been tightened in the affected areas.”
