It remained unclear where the victim, who was about 30 years of age, was killed but his dismembered body was dumped in a gutter directly opposite Ojido Market.

The victim was stabbed in the neck, the two arms and the two legs were severed from the body and kept inside a sack which was also dumped few meters to where the torso was dumped.

The gory sight struck fear into the residents many of whom trooped to the scene to behold the butchered body. Many of them took pictures of the body with their phone.

A commercial cyclist who preferred anonymity said: "We saw the butchered body in the early hours of the day; the victim was wearing earrings and was well dressed. We suspect the victim might be a member of a cult gang and must have been killed by a rival group

"This is horrible, look at the sack containing his severed legs and arms. We believe the incident might have happened in the midnight of Tuesday and the victim might have been killed elsewhere only for his body to be dumped here.”

Police spokesman Alberto Adeyemi said the state command was aware of the incident and investigation had commenced.

Adeyemi disclosed that the Police had evacuated the dismembered body to the mortuary urging residents who were aware of the time the body was dumped to assist in investigation.

Responding to a question, Adeyemi said: “The matter could be cult related, it could be robbery related or he might have duped somebody. Had he been alive, he would have assisted us better in our investigation but we will continue to do our work on the matter.”
