

Rasaq Ogundare's lanky physique belied his obsession with pulling the trigger when hunting for members of rival cult gangs in the Ijoko area of Ado Odo/Ota Local Government of Ogun State.

For many years, the 25-year-old school dropout and leading member of Eiye confraternity terrorised perceived opponents in the community until he was arrested by detectives from the Special Anti Robbery Squad (SARS).

Ogundare, aka Babalawo Poly, said he had killed some people, including one Tosin and Dare, who were Aiye cult boys in the community.

He narrated how friends in the Ijoko neighbourhood initiated him into cultism, saying: "I am a member of Eiye Confraternity. We have been terrorising Ijoko community and killing people for some time now. I joined the cult group about two years ago when some boys in the neighbourhood initiated me through beating and alcoholic drink.

"I have killed so many people, including one Tosin and Dare, who are members of Aiye Confraternity. The duo were deadly too, and we used to hunt for Aiye members because they can kill too. Whenever we attacked Aiye members, they would abandon their motorcycles and sundry items and we would sell them."