N 18- year-old boy, Eva Endurance Ekpoto, was stabbed to death at the weekend after a fight broke out between two suspected cult groups, the “Eiyes” and “Aiyes”, at Kehinde Street, Ajegunle, Lagos.

Ekpoto reportedly went for a birthday party with his friends, when an unidentified man pierced him with an object in the middle of a heated altercation.

The Nation learnt that he was killed at Cemetery Market along Kehinde Street at Ajegunle. Scores of others, including a policeman, sustained injuries.

His friends and others fled the scene while some persons, who recognised him, managed to get his body on a wheelbarrow to Layeni Police Station at Ojo road, close to his home on 69, Ezeagwu Street.

The Divisional Police Officer at Layeni Police Station reportedly transferred the case to Ajeromi Station since the incident occurred within the jurisdiction.

Officers at Ajeromi Police Station said his body has been deposited at the morgue.

Two suspects, Segun Maliki and Imole Olanrewaju, have been arrested and transferred to Panti Station for further investigation.

According to an Inspector of Police at Layeni Police Station, the area boys, “who brought the victim, took to their heels on arriving at the station”.

He added: “From all indications, a tattoo was inscribed on his body. It shows it belongs to one of the cult groups. There was a party organised by a girl and you know they will want to claim supremacy. I think that led to the fight.”

The mother of the deceased said: “That evening when I left for service, he was around. He is still a secondary school student about entering SS1. I pray God prevails because the real people that did this thing may not be seen. They might just catch innocent people.”

Spokesperson for the Lagos State Police Command, Dolapo Badmus, who confirmed the incident, said two suspects had been arrested.
