A pepper seller, Omowumi Azeez, yesterday relived how her husband, Ibrahim, was killed by suspected cultists.

The late Azeez, a commercial motorcyclist, was shot dead by suspected cultists, who robbed residents of Iyana-Odo Roundabout, Suberu-Oje area of Kola, Alagbado in Lagos last Wednesday.

Azeez, 50, popularly called "Irinlomo" was returning to his 12, Raji Adebayo Street home, when the Eye fraternity group assaulted him. The group stormed the area around 11pm, raided some houses and carted away properties.

According to residents, the attack was extended to Oke Abiye and Kola areas where two persons were shot dead. The group allegedly threatened to return with larger reinforcement as they were leaving the community.

While the cause of the attack was yet to be ascertained, some residents believe it was an offshoot of discords between the Eye fraternity group and Aye cultist group based in the area. It was gathered that a similar occurrence that left a Ghanaian man dead was recorded in the area.

A distraught Mrs Azeez said her husband did not involve in any disagreement that could warrant his killing.

She said: "I was at home and expecting my husband that night. Suddenly I heard noise around our compound that some thieves have killed an Okada man. Later, they started shouting Irin! Irin!! because that's what they call him in our area. I ran out and on getting to the scene, I met my husband there, lifeless on the floor. All of them had fled. We reported to the police and they came after to take him away. He is still in the mortuary."

But a relative of the community head who didn't want his name mentioned said the cultists identified the late Azeez by calling his name severally.

"What we heard was that they robbed about three houses in the area and when they were leaving, they met Irin on his way back from work. They asked him to lie down before shooting him," he said.

A young man who works at Kola bus stop said the group seized the opportunity of fighting their rival gang to rob the residents.

One of the youths in the area simply identified as KC said it was shocking that the cultist robbed and killed people. He said items including money, phones, goods found in some stores were stolen.
