Senate President of the Ebonyi State University (EBSU) Students' Union Government (SUG) is dead. CAMPUSLIFE gathered that the late David Sunday Nwizi was knocked down from his motorcycle on Monday at Pastoral Junction on Enugu-Ebonyi Highway as he travelled to Isieke town from Abakaliki, the state capital. He died on the spot.

The accident threw members of the union and students into mourning. His colleagues described him as a "fine comrade", saying his death was "tragic loss" to the union and the school.

Obinna Nwuguru, a member of the SUG, said David's death had left permanent vacuum in the union, saying he was not sure how members would get over the shock when the school resumes after Yuletide.

He said: "I am deeply sad about this unfortunate incident. Our Senate President's death is a big loss and I cannot say how members would receive the news when we reconvene in January. I am sure no member would be happy about this, because he was the best we have had."

A Sociology and Anthropology student, who gave his name as Joseph, relived his last moment with the late student. He said: "The late David saw me on road moment before his death. I was waiting for a cab. He stopped and offered to give me a lift. When I came down, he bade me farewell, telling me there will be a next time.

"Sadly, there will be no next time. I still remember how we used to struggle for egusi soup at our New York Hostel. I love you brother. Your memories will remain evergreen in our hearts."
