Members of the Nigerian Television Authority (NTA) Television College (TV COLLEGE) in Jos, the Plateau State capital, were thrown into mourning last Wednesday, following the death of a final year Television Journalism student.

Brenda Dachomo Abel, 26, died in a road accident on her way to Lagos to buy goods to start her business. CAMPUSLIFE gathered that the late student had planned the journey in March, but postponed it till after the college's first semester examination, which was concluded last week.

Details about the accident were sketchy at press time, but it was learnt that the late Brenda was travelling in a passenger bus.

Her course mates were shocked on learning about her death. Daniel Tsafa, who said the late Brenda sat close to him during the examination, became agitated when the news broke.

“How can such a lively lady die like that?” Daniel screamed, as he relived their moments together.

He said: “I have fond memories of her throughout our examination period. She was lively and elegant all through the period. Every student got fascinated by her welcoming and quiet nature. She was studious and her determination to excel in academics was not hidden.

“She was likely to be the most reserved student in our department. Her life will remain a reference point for courage, decency and beauty. We have lost a rare gem.”

Another classmate, James Dayak, said: “The late Brenda was a good friend and sister. She was always smiling. One thing about her is that, she made students laugh whenever we were having challenges. We will miss her.”

Edrach Mwanse said the late Brenda got close to him about a month ago. “She was a wonderful friend, despite that I knew her about a month ago. We shared a bond that people would think I have known her for years. She was a lady with strong heart and good goals. When she called me that she was travelling to Lagos, I never it was the last time I would speak to her.”

The remains of the late Brenda have been deposited at Plateau Specialist Hospital. The body would be interred in her Kassa Heipang hometown in Barkin Ladi Local Government Area.
