

Amosun loses two security aides in four days

THE Ogun State governor, Senator Ibikunle Amosun has lost two of his security details to the cold hands of death in quick succession.

The two security aides: the Second-In-Command to the governor's convoy, Busoye Olayinka, popularly called 'Robot,' and Wale Aderemi of the Department of State Security Service (DSS) died four days apart.

While Busoye died in a ghastly motor accident on Thursday night, Wale died in an Abeokuta hospital after a brief illness.

Ernest NWOKOLO, Abeokuta

The Nation gathered that Busoye, an Assistant Superintendent of Police (ASP), was involved in the accident along Papalanto stretch of the old Lagos/Abeokuta expressway around 9 PM.

He was said to be traveling with his younger brother when the accident occurred. The said brother also lost his life in the accident.

It was learnt that the duo were driving to Busoye's home after the day's work but met their unfortunate end.

His ash-colour Nissan Primera marked, Lagos, PH 406 KJA collided with a truck with registration number, Kwara, LEM 77 XA on the expressway.

The truck was said to be reversing from the compound of a steel company by the highway when the two vehicles crashed into it each other.

The State Commander of Federal Road Safety Corps (FRSC), Clement Oladele, who confirmed the accident to reporters, disclosed that the two victims were taken to the General Hospital in Ifo.

However, Wale died in a private hospital in Panseke area of Abeokuta.

The Ekiti State born cop was said to have been discharged from the same hospital where he was treated for typhoid few days before his death.

He reportedly fell into the toilet of his apartment and was rushed back to the hospital where he gave up the ghost.

His remains, it was gathered were taken to his home town in Ekiti on Thursday.

Lagos unveils