Pandemonium broke out in Oke-Ado area of Ibadan, in Ibadan South West Local Government of Oyo State yesterday following a bloody clash between factional cult groups, resulting in the murder of a middle age man.

The deceased, identified as Tunde who was shot dead, was said to be a relation of the popular Ladega family in Ibadan.

The fight, which started on Sunday night lasted till Monday, leaving the entire area deserted and paralysing socio-economic activities at the popular Oke-Ado market.

Shop owners at the market and environs could not open for business due to fear of possible attacks by the hoodlums who have taken over the streets.

The victim's lifeless body was laid on the ever busy Oke-Ado-Molete road, with scores of youths mourning their departed friend.

Speaking on the incident, the Oyo state Police spokesman, Adekunle Ajisebutu, a Superintendent (SP), said no body was killed in the fight.

He however promised to update this reporter with details of the crisis when he arrived from his journey to Lagos.

According to eyewitness account, trouble started at a night party when argument between two friends led into group fight, and dangerous weapons including guns were employed.

In the melee, stray bullet hits one of the boys on the neck and died due to loss excessive blood.

About nine others were also said to have sustained serious injuries in the fight which spread to Oke Bola, Itamaya and Oredein areas of Ibadan.

Many vehicles' windscreens were smashed as well as commercial motorcycles, who ran into the crisis zone.

A resident said: "Since Sunday we could not sleep because of these bad boys. What we learnt is that they fought one another other in a party and in the process one of them died of gunshot. And ever since then the entire residents could not have peace. They brought the body of the dead boy and place it at the family house and started causing trouble."
