

Soldiers gun down suspected cultist in Imo

June 17, 2020 in City Beats, News Update

0

By Damian Duruiheoma, Owerri

Soldiers have killed a suspected killer cultist and kidnapper, Chijioke Onyeze, popularly known as Bracket, throwing communities in Ohaji Egbema council area of Imo State into wild jubilation.

Bracket was shot and killed on Sunday evening in Ihie community where he made himself king, The Nation learned.

According to village sources, since the beginning of the year Bracket had publicly shot and killed six persons, who were opposed to his 'authority' in his ^{close} community.

Read Also: Two soldiers killed, others wounded by IED in Yobe

It was gathered that Bracket and his gang were involved in kidnapping and armed robbery.

A community source said, "We are all happy about the death of Bracket because our village was made hell on earth."

Police spokesman, Orlando Ikeokwu confirmed Bracket's killing, saying one AK 47 rifle was recovered from him as efforts were on to apprehend his fleeing collaborators.

Previous Post

COVID-19: Edo Assembly shut for 2 weeks for fumigation

Next Post

Missing funds: Army dismisses Gen with 'dishonour, disgrace'

Discussion about this post