A man has been shot dead on Election Day allegedly by members of a disbanded vigilance group in Evwreni community, Ughelli North council area of Delta State.

The Nation learnt that Muvi Unagha was gunned down at the weekend at a popular bar in the community while waiting for election materials for the just-concluded local polls.

It was learnt that Unagha and some youths in the community, mostly members of the All Progressives Congress (APC) were drinking at the bar when three cars pulled over and gunmen in them opened fire on the drinkers.

The victim was rushed to Central Hospital at Ughelli where he was confirmed dead.

Ewwereni community has been embroiled in crisis in the past one year leading to the death of over eight persons.

Police spokesman Edafe Bright confirmed the incident saying, "A young man was shot dead yesterday at Ewwereni, and as we speak, the police are on the trail of the suspects in order to bring them to book, but as of now, no arrest has been made."
