

Like the Ondo incident, jealousy turned a sacred Sunday to a black day in Egbeda, a Lagos suburb on March 6, 2020, when a 24-year-old man identified as Daniel Okocha allegedly killed his live-in-lover, Nkechi Vivian Agwor.

Okocha had refused to allow Nkechi, 20, to go to church, but the deceased insisted, and the quarrel degenerated into a fight during which Okocha allegedly stabbed her with a knife in the neck and fled.

Okocha was believed to have suspected that Nkechi was seeing another man and could use going to church as an excuse to see the mystery man.

Nkechi's father, Innocent Agwor, said he wanted justice.

He said: "What I am asking from the government is justice. Whatever justice that befits such a murder should be administered to him. I don't need compensation because there is no amount of money that will be paid that will bring back my daughter."