About eight villagers were killed and a military base set ablaze when Islamic State West Africa Province (ISWAP) fighters attacked a remote village in Chibok Local Government Area of Borno State, a source said.

It was learnt that the insurgents stormed the Kautikari village in large numbers at 7 pm on Tuesday and opened fire.

Vigilante sources said bodies recovered from the bushes were burnt.

“We have recovered eight bodies from the scene of yesterday’s attack on our village (Kautikari); many are still unaccounted for as they are missing. The military base was completely burnt down and some residential homes equally torched,” the sources said.
