THE Police in Ondo State have confirmed the killing of Mr Gbenga Olofinmoyegun, a Director in the state Teaching Service Commission (TESCOM) who was declared missing on Thursday.

The command spokesperson, SP Funmilayo Odunlami, told the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) in Akure yesterday that the mutilated body of the director was found on Saturday in Akure.

According to her, the deceased was identified by some people by the suit he wore before he went missing.

"Yesterday afternoon, somebody called to inform us that a decomposing corpse was found at Saint Theresa, close to St. Peter in Akure.

"When the police got there to remove the corpse, some people came around and identified him as the director we had been searching for in the past three days.

"It was his suit they used to identify him, but his head had been cut off and his chest ripped open while his intestines were removed," Odunlami said.

The police spokesperson said that investigation was continuing to unravel the circumstances behind the killing of the director.

"Investigation has started, his phone was left behind and some other things too. So, we are going to work with what we have to know if he had issues with anybody.

"And, maybe, it's a ritual case, but it is investigation that will reveal all these," the Command's spokesperson said.
