The victims were said to have terrorised residents of the community as well as commuters on the East/West Road.

They were also linked to the killing of four members of local vigilance group in the council area last week, during which two of their victims were beheaded.

Confirming the death of the suspected cult members, the Commissioner of Police (CP), Emeka Nwonyi, said the police achieved the feat with assistance from the community vigilance group.

Nwonyi on assumption of duty in the state last week assured of restoring security across the state.

He lauded the efforts of the personnel of Rumuji Police Division and the local vigilance group who he said provided credible information that led to the killing of the hoodlums.

Some of the exhibits recovered from the criminals were two pump action guns, one locally made gun and empty cartridges of AK 47.

The state police boss restated his earlier commitment to maintaining the existing peace while soliciting support and information from members of the public.
