

Police nab woman for alleged killing

Our Reporter September 14, 2023

Delta State Police Command has arrested a woman over alleged killing of her husband at Mosogar community in Ethiope West Local Government.

Command spokesman
DSP Bright Edafe told the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) through the phone yesterday in Warri that the woman pulled the testicles of the deceased during a quarrel.

“She did not cut the testicles; she drew them, and you know that part is delicate.

“The man died in the process. The suspect has been arrested,” Edafe said.

A source, who preferred anonymity, said an elder brother of the deceased reported the matter on Tuesday at Mosogar Police Station.

Read Also: Niger Delta minister meets Jonathan, Asari-Dokubo, discusses issues of stolen crude, others

The source said the name of the deceased was Jakpor Efemini, adding that he was 32.

Related Posts

- Police confirm arrest of doctor accused of harvesting housewife's kidney in Plateau

- Police rescue victim, kill one in shootout with kidnappers in Anambra
- Police advisory

He said the incident occurred on Tuesday about 1:20 pm, following misunderstanding between them.

“My younger brother’s wife held and drew the testicles of her husband, Efemini, aged 32, while they were fighting in Mosogar.

“In the process, my brother slumped and was rushed to hospital where he was later certified dead.

“The body has been deposited at a mortuary in Mosogar,” the source quoted the deceased’s brother as saying.

The suspect, who was reported to have escaped to an unknown destination after allegedly committing the crime, has been nabbed by the police and is undergoing interrogation.