Gabkwet, in a statement yesterday, said the terrorists were killed at their meeting point near Degbawa, a reclusive location within the Mandara Mountains in Goza Local Government of Borno State.

The spokesperson said the terrorists had "planned to meet to review the attack as well as plan the next line of attack on innocent civilians and other vulnerable targets."

Gabkwet said: "The air strikes were called for after intelligence showed the sighting of some key terrorists' figures and their foot soldiers arriving at the location for a probable meeting."
