

Four killed in another Ondo communal clash

Four persons have been killed over a land dispute between Akure and Idanre communities in Ondo State

The four persons were found dead at Gbalegi, the disputed area between Akure and Gbalegi.

Last week, two persons were killed in Akoko Southwest Local Government when youths of Ebo, Owaki, and Oke-Odo clashed over a boundary dispute.

Ondo Police spokesperson, Funmilayo Odunlami, who confirmed the clash, said seven barrel guns and a large cache of arms were recovered.

She said thugs mobilized themselves in the Gbalegi area and started attacking the people.

“The Police on receipt of the information moved to the scene and arrested seven people who had charms and seven single barrel guns with a cache of live ammunition and expended ones. The Police further combed the nearby bush areas and found four corpses with bullet wounds.

“The Commissioner of Police (CP) calls for caution in handling cases related to boundary issues and urges communities involved in land disputes to approach the law court for proper redress rather than resorting to self-help or violence.”
