ABOUT four students of Michael Otedola College of Primary Education were on Monday afternoon reportedly shot as police tried to disperse protesting students.

There are, however, conflicting reports on the state of health of the injured students with some students alleging three of them had died, while others said only one died.

The Nigerian Tribune gathered that some students, who were prevented from writing the institution first semester examination were protesting when the incident happened.

The provost of the institution had allegedly invited policemen after the protesting students started destroying school facilities.

A student of the institution, who spoke with the Nigerian Tribune under the condition of anonymity said he was not aware if any of the student died.

"We started our first semester exam on Monday and those, who had not completed the payment of their school fees were prevented from entering the hall," the student said.

He also added that the angry students, who were initially begging mobilised and started to protest.

"They were initially begging but later they mobilised and started singing in protest against the school authority," he said.
