BARELY a week after a newspaper worker was killed in Kaduna State, a health practitioner in the state, Isiyaku Garba, has also been killed by gunmen on Saturday night.

Garba's friend, Mallam Usman, told journalists in Kaduna on Sunday, that the gunmen trailed Garba to his house and shot him in the presence of his family shortly after breaking his fast.

According to Usman, "I just returned from the Tudun Wada cemetery, where we buried Garba of the Kaduna State School of Health Technology, who was killed in his house last night by assassins.

He said "Garba, a unionist, had finished his iftar and even did his salat al-tarawiy  arby mosque.

"While he was observing the prayers, the assassins got to his house and were told he was out for salat. They decided to wait for his return like good humans do.

"When he returned, they got hold of him and another person and sought to identify him. They singled him out and took him into his room and shot him thrice."

The deceased was the president of the Academic Staff Union of the Shehu Idris School of Health Technology in Makarfi, Kaduna State and was Head of Department, Dental Department of the school.

Until his death, Garba was also the national vice president, Nigerian Dental Therapists' Association.

The police are yet to come out with a statement on the killing, but had since commenced investigations.
