Grim-faced sympathisers, including soldiers thronged the scene of an accident on the Ibadan/Abeokuta Road Tuesday morning which according to reports, happened at the early hours of the day in which a soldier was said to have been crushed by a truck.

According to the Nigerian Tribune findings, the soldier left Command Secondary School, Bode Igbo, Ibadan which was a

Other vehicles coming behind were said to have also run over the body because it was very early in the morning and visibility was poor, leading to it being mangled.

Only the torso of the body was in one piece, but without the head while the remaining parts of the body had to be picked from different spots and put into polythene bags by rescue operators.

A young lady working as a petrol attendant with a petrol station close to the scene of the accident who would not want to be named told the Nigerian Tribune that she resumed work about 7:00am at which time hundreds of people had already assembled including men of the Federal Road Safety Corporation (FRSC).

Others who spoke to the Nigerian Tribune confirmed the incident which led to a long queue of vehicles and some commotion as commuters going to Omi-Adio/ Abeokuta and the opposite direction tried to find alternative routes.
