Two people were, on Sunday, feared killed, as youths from Patey Streets clashed with their counterpart from Lafiaji area of the Island of Lagos State during an Eid El Kabir celebration

The clash created serious panic among residents of Patey Street, following reported gunshots from a faction of the rival hoodlums.

Nigerian Tribune gathered that trouble started on Sunday afternoon, when youths from Patey Street were organising a party at the community square in the area.

The party was said to be going on smoothly until around noon, when some hoodlums, suspected to be from Lafiaji, stormed the area.

A free-for-all started and guests at the party scampered for safety, following reported gunshots from the Lafiaji Boys, which reportedly hit two people.

Nigerian Tribune also gathered that the invasion might not be unconnected with the superiority clash between youths from the two Lagos Island communities

A resident of the area, who simply identified himself as Babatunde Aremu, said "We were celebrating the Sallah festival in our community square when some boys from Lafiaji attacked us at the venue of the party and started chasing us away."

When contacted, the image maker in charge of the state police command, Kenneth Nwosu, promised to get back to our reporter but could not do so as at the time of filing in this report.
