NO fewer than 10 people were reported to have been killed in a ghastly autocrash, with several others also reported to have sustained varying degrees of injuries in Borno State, while jubilating over Major-General Muhammadu Buhari's victory at the March 28 presidential election.

Nigerian Tribune gathered that corpses and victims, who were brought to specialist hospital on Wednesday, were said to have been involved in the accident while celebrating the victory of the All Progressives Congress (APC) over the Peoples Democratic Party (PDP).

Speaking to a member of the Borno State vigilante group, popularly called Civilian JTF, who identified himself as Bulama Gana, he said they brought some of the victims to the specialist hospital, adding that they have had warning the youth against taking hard drugs and overspeeding in the name of celebrating Buhari's emergence as president-elect, but they would not listen.

Bulama said: "Most of them were influenced by drugs. We have even arrested some for driving carelessly and overspeeding. Buhari's victory is not about madness. I think the authorities should do something about it and there should be law and order. This is just the announcement of the presidential result, I do not know what they are going to do when the General is to be sworn-in come May 29."

A staff of the hospital, Elijah Pindar, said most of the victims were being admitted at the Orthopedic ward.

"I don't know why people should go to that extent as to taking their own lives for someone who may not even know or hear of their supportive efforts in any way. To me, it makes no sense. Of course, one can be happy, but not in such a manner. It is really unfortunate and sad," he said.
