An estate agent and hotelier in Lagos State, Tunji Alaso, was, on Monday morning, killed during a clash between house owners and land speculators in the Alagbado area of Lagos State.

Tribune Online gathered that residents of Temidire Alagbado were protesting against the activities of land speculators in their area when the incident occurred.

Some residents of the area were said to have become angry following attempt by Alaso to force house owners to stop protesting.

There were also claims that the man might have come to plead with the house owners who were at daggers drawn with land speculators.

It was gathered that a free-for-all ensued between the landlords and the speculators, and while the fighting was on, Alaso was stabbed while some other people sustained injuries.

Alaso was said to have been rushed to a hospital where he later died as a result of loss of too much blood.

The image maker in charge of the Lagos State police command, Kenneth Nwosu, confirmed the incident to the Tribune Online and added that investigations had commenced on the incident.

"This morning, a distress call was received that one Tunji Rasak was attacked and injured when he came into the midst of residents of Temidire Alagbado who were protesting against the activities of land speculators.

"Preliminary investigation is on to know what led to the incident and those who were involved," he said.
