A policeman, on Tuesday night, shot dead a commercial driver identified as Likinyo Olumide, at the old Sagamu Toll gate, along Sagamu-Benin Expressway.

The driver, who was carrying traders from Idumagbo, Lagos Island, to Okitipupa in Ondo State, was shot dead after one of the policemen ordered him to alight from the vehicle.

Giving account of how the incident happened, one of the passengers in the vehicle, Folake Egbeuwalo, said the driver was the one that used to carry them to Lagos for business purpose.

She explained that the policeman took to his heels after he shot the driver and later came back with a Hilux van marked NPF 104 OD to carry the remains of the driver away.

"When we reached Sagamu toll gate, we did not know that there were policemen on the road, they asked the driver to park and he obeyed. The driver came out of the car and stood beside the vehicle. The policeman moved to the other side of the road and shot him."

Likinyo was reported to have left behind a pregnant wife and six children.

Meanwhile, the Assistant Inspector General of Police, Zone 2, Balade Hassan, who was on a visit to Ogun State, said the policeman would face the wrath of the law.

The AIG said "the regulation is clear and the constitution is about the right to life of all Nigerians, so, if anybody takes the life of anybody, be it a policeman or civilian, he or she will face the full wrath of the law."
