Customs officer's killers arrested in Imo

JOE NWACHUKWU - OWERRI

THE Imo State Police Command has arrested the killers of an officer of Nigeria Customs Service (names withheld), who was slain on September 23, 2015, by a gang of hoodlums while on official duty.

The Imo State Commissioner of Police, Mr. Taiwo Lakanu, who disclosed this to newsmen in Owerri mentioned one Chibuzo Ike of Umuota Umuhu in Ngor Okpala Local Government Area of the state and one Henry Ndubisi Simon of No 24, new road, Amakohia in Owerri North Local Government Area of the same state, to be the suspects behind the dastardly act.

The late customs officer was said to be one of the officers on duty on the ill-fated day at Umuhu (along Owerri-Aba road) in Ngor Okpala LGA.

Briefing journalists at the Command Headquarters, Owerri, the police commissioner said: "owing to the attack on the ill-fated officer which led to his death, his AK 47 rifle and his Mazda 626 saloon car were taken away by the criminals."

According to Lakanu, the hoodlums were arrested following investigations by security operatives from the state command's Criminal Investigation and Intelligence Department.
