Gunmen kill suspected cultist near police station

OLALEKAN OLABULO

GUNMEN, suspected to be members of the Eiye Confraternity group, over the weekend dared the police in Sango Ota area of Ogun State, when they killed a member of a rival faction near the police station.

The deceased, simply identified as Jide, was alleged to be a member of the Aiye Confraternity group and he was said to be working with a lotto company, near the police station.

The image maker in charge of the state police command, Muiyiwa Adejobi confirmed the incident to Lagos Metro and added that "many suspected cultists had been arrested in connection with the killing.

Lagos Metro gathered that the killing of Jide was one of the reprisal attacks from members of Eiye and Aiye Confraternities in Sango area of Ogun State.

It was further gathered that the latest war between the two cult groups started last weekend, when one of the leaders of the Aiye Confraternity was attacked by Eiye members.

A resident of Sango, who pleaded anonymity, while speaking with Lagos Metro narrated that "what actually happened was a clear case of rivalry between the two groups.

"There is hardly a fortnight that you won't hear of attack and reprisal attacks from members of the gangs around Araromi, Idi Orogbo and the back of Sango garage. The build up to the latest clash was recorded about two weeks ago at the candle night programme of the Marindoti Carnival.

"One of the leaders of the Aiye Confraternity, who is also close to the organizers of the carnival was attacked and almost killed. His gang reinforced and went after the rival group around Idi Orogbo, where one person was shot and a vehicle vandalised by members of the Aiye group," the resident explained.

Lagos Metro however gathered that the deceased, Jide, had earlier made merry with members of his group, near the scene of his death, before he was attacked and shot.
