

Police parade ex-soldier for stabbing girlfriend to death in Plateau

March 14, 2016

Written by: Isaac Shobayo - Jos

Plateau State Police Command has arrested an ex-soldier, Sunday Umaru, formerly with Sector 7 of Operation Safe Heaven, in the state, for killing his girlfriend, one Miss Charity Thomas, by stabbing her to death.

Parading the suspect on Monday, the state Commissioner of Police, Mr Adekunle Oladunjoye, who said the incident occurred in Riyom Local Government Area of the state, said the suspect lured his girlfriend from Kaduna to stay with him in the state on the pretext of helping her.

According to the Police boss, Umaru suddenly went beserk when he discovered several love text messages from other men in her handset and decended on her and in the process, stabbed her in the stomach, adding that the suspect would be charge to court.

Also paraded by the police boss was one Dabung David Dele, who strangled to death, Nanchi Zakariya, a student of Psychology, University of Jos, adding that the suspect was apprehended by police detectives from Nassarawa Gwong in Jos North Local Government Area of the state.

According to him, the suspect, on interrogation, owned up to the crime, adding that the case had already been charged to court.

The police boss said that there would be no hiding place for criminals in the state as the command is intensifying efforts through intensive patrols, intelligent-led policing and community patnership to checkmate criminal elements in the state