It was gathered that the young man also allegedly stabbed his lover's mother, who had come to settle the ensued dispute between the two. The mother luckily escaped the attack with serious injuries.

Sources said she was rushed to the University of Ilorin Teaching Hospital (UIH), where she was said to be receiving treatment at the emergency unit.

Investigations revealed that the duo, who had reportedly been going out for some time, had also been having serious argument over issue of marriage, with the girl always insisting that she could not marry the man because he allegedly went out with several other women at the same time.

It was gathered that they went out on Sunday night and returned to the girl's house at Tanke area of Ilorin, where the mother had also come on a visit to her daughter.

Sources said early on Monday, the argument resurfaced with the girl still maintaining her position, but the man was alleged to have threatened to kill the lady if she refused his proposal.

It was at the height of the argument that the lady's mother reportedly came out of her room with the intention of settling the dispute.

The young man was said to have dashed to the kitchen where he allegedly brought out a knife with which he attacked the two women.

A source who saw the corpse of the lady, said to be in her 30s, added that the woman was stabbed several times on the neck and around her armpit.

Another version of the incident claimed that the man had first reported for duty at his office, located on the University of Ilorin road, before he told his colleagues he wanted to return and pick something at home.
