GUNMEN, on Sunday evening, killed the district head of Fadan Kirshi, in Sanga Local Government Area of Kaduna State, Bala Madaki and his 20-year-old son, Emmanuel.

The district head, according to a reliable source, was on a mat with his son, relaxing in front of palace when they were killed.

"The hoodlums slaughtered them and left them lifeless. A member of the family later noticed the mutilated bodies and raised the alarm which attracted other family members and neighbours," the source told the Nigerian Tribune.

At the time of filing this report, no arrest had been made.

Business activities and social gatherings at the village had been suspended, to mourn the death of the monarch who was described a peace loving person.

A brother of the deceased, who pleaded anonymity, told the Nigerian Tribune in a telephone interview that his murder might not be unconnected with his persistent call for a chiefdom.

"For many years, he had been in the forefront for the agitation for a chiefdom. This is because the Gundara people are the most populous tribe in Sanga and Jema'a local government areas of the state," he said.

Sources affirmed that the remains of the monarch and his son had been deposited at the mortuary of Sanga General Hospital.

When contacted, the image maker of the state police command, Abubakar Zubairu, confirmed the incident, adding that perpetrators would be fished out soon.
