THERE was commotion on the Apapa-Oshodi Expressway in Oshodi area as a vulcaniser was crushed to death by two urban mass transit bus drivers.

The news of the death of the vulcaniser, simply identified as Saheed, sparked off instant protest from traders in the area.

The drivers were struggling for space when the deceased vulcaniser was trapped in-between their vehicles.

A yet-to-be identified driver of one of the buses was later arrested by the police while the other one escaped.

Lagos Metro gathered that the death of Saheed, said to be popular among transport unionists and lotto operators in Oshodi, forced many traders to close their shops for the day.

Angry traders, artisans and residents later vented their anger on other bus drivers by ensuring that they were sent away from their usual park.

A trader, Tony, told Lagos Metro that "the vehicles were parked in front of each other when suddenly there was a vacant space in the front of the two of them.

“Ordinarily, the bus in the front should have moved to the vacant space but the one at the back tried to overtake him and, in the process, the vulcaniser was crushed.”

A transport union member, Olayiwola, told Lagos Metro that “Saheed had reportedly told them not to stay in front of his space, where he was doing his vulcanising job.”

The union member, who pleaded anonymity, added that “there was no mark on his body but he was unconscious and people rushed him to the hospital, where he was confirmed dead.”

The protest started when the other drivers went about with their business as if nothing had happened, prompting traders to protest.

“One of the drivers ran away while the other followed the body of the vulcaniser to the hospital, before he was arrested,” the union member said.

Efforts to get the reaction of the image maker in charge of the state police command, Dolapo Badmos, failed as calls put through to her mobile telephone line were not answered as of the time of filing this report.
