

Woman's decomposing body found in her residence 4 days after being declared missing

MUHAMMAD SABIU
- KADUNA

A lecturer with the College of Education, Maru, Zamfara State, Mallam Yakubu Maradun, is currently helping the state police command to unravel the circumstances surrounding the murder of his 25-year-old wife, Malama Naja'atu Abubakar.

Findings gathered that the decomposed body of Naja'atu was discovered in her matrimonial residence under a very unusual circumstance four days after she was declared missing.

According to a source, Naja'atu left home last week Monday on the permission of her husband to go to a bank to obtain her Biometric Verification Number (BVN) number, but did not return home, and this prompted her husband, friends and relations to search for her.

The search for the missing lady gradually became intensified for four days, until when last Friday, a close relation visited the residence of the missing woman to sympathise with her husband.

The source revealed that, upon entering the house, the visitor perceived a very strong odour of something decomposing.

The husband explained that the odour could be the smell from a broken toilet.

The source further narrated that the visitor insisted that the room from where the odour was coming should be opened to verify what it was.

"It was shocking that inside the room, the decomposing body of Naja'atu was found on a floor covered with rats while flies were hovering all over her, just as the husband became dumfounded," the source said.

The spokesman of the state police command DSP Shehu Muhammad confirmed the incident, saying investigation was still ongoing in order to unravel the case.

Some of the suspects paraded by the Abia State police command recently.

NSCDC collaborates with stakeholders on social vices in Ogun

OLAYINKA OLUKOYA-ABEOKUTA

THE Nigeria Security and Civil Defence Corps (NSCDC) has collaborated with stakeholders in the education industry and security agencies to checkmate social vices among primary and secondary schools in Ogun State.

school security management: The role of stakeholders in education sector in Ogun State will expose all categories of students and stakeholders to the dangers of the menace of these social vices," Awosusi added.

Varsity student arrested over death of 67-yr-old tricycle operator